It's not what you taste

It's what you spice your memory with

Agni – Fire, since it was tamed by ancient Indians, it has been the residing deity of all things culinary. Enjoy the rich and exotic ten day culinary trip down the spice-laden trail of South India or up North India. Sink your teeth into succulent meats gently teased by Indian fire or savor the melting taste of fragrant rice prepared over charcoal. Medium, rare or well done, Agni in its different forms serves you cuisine to your ultimate satisfaction.

Camellia Panjabi, arguably India's foremost gourmet and food expert, a legend throughout the culinary world and credited with introducing regional Indian cooking to the UK, besides being the author of the best selling “ 50 Great Curries of India” will be planning, to the last detail, all the culinary inputs for you for this incredible journey. She is one of the directors of Masala World, which owns Chutney Mary, Veeraswamy, Amaya and several Masala Zone restaurants in London. Camellia as your Cuisine Curator.....It couldn't get better than this!

While on this culinary holiday you will enjoy personal, hands-on cooking sessions with acclaimed chefs at the Taj Hotels and escorted visits that will include shopping in local markets for fresh produce and spices -the raw materials for cooking your lunch, celebratory meals hosted by the chefs, et al.

In South India you will sojourn at Fisherman's Cove - Chennai, Taj Garden Retreat- Madurai and Taj Malabar – Kochi. Be it a local meal tempered with aromatic spices or a barbecue under the stars- the rich beauty of this region leaves one spellbound.

Kochi truly came on the world map with the arrival of Vasco-D-Gama. However, in 1662-63, the Dutch colonized Kochi. Its past is so rich that it has been called a museum city, with a history of Portuguese, Dutch, British and Jewish trading settlements and one of the oldest synagogues in India. Cochin (now Kochi), established as a city in 1341 AD, is one of those rare places where the twentieth century and ancient civilizations exist side by side.  Sunset Cruise: Later in the afternoon board your boat from the harbour front of hotel and proceed on the cruise where you will watch the fisher-folks still using the Chinese nets for fishing – quite a sight. The local market where the fresh catch is sold is close by and not only is fish sold there but also cooked, ready to eat in the small shacks. Taj Malabar Included category: Deluxe Room	2½ hr drive
